

I am very much opposed to allowing Broadband "NOISE" to be transmitted on power lines. It seems that more than an inquiry is needed to establish some real world data on the effects to all services under FCC regulation. The FCC would, in my opinion, be delinquent in allowing BPL without definite and repeatable solid proof that BPL would not interfere with any other service. Please find this inquiry to be terminated due to lack of solid technical proofing of it's potential interference capability.
